

TO MEET HERE TUESDAY

GENOA DEAD, IS TARDIEU VIEW

Roy Breg, Southwestern Field Secretary, to Deliver Address.

Failure Due to Lloyd George's Failure to Grasp Soviet Purposes.

BY ANDRE TARDIEU
Former French High Commissioner to America.
Special Cable to the Standard-Examiner.

PARIS, April 29.—The Genoa conference drags towards its end without having solved a single economic problem. It is entangling itself daily more and more in a maze of political difficulties. Perhaps it is not easy to appreciate this from the distance of the United States, therefore it is important to emphasize it.

From the outset, the conference was blocked on its economic terrain by the attitude of the Soviet delegation. Not only did Tchitcherine and company, their audacity reinforced by the inertia of the allies, when confronted with the treaty of Rapallo, decide not to pay anything they owed, but demanded an indemnity of fifty billion rubles. Still worse, they manifested a stubborn intention not to concede any real satisfaction on the most important point of the Russian reconstruction problem—namely, the question of private property.

GUARANTEES REFUSED

Whether talking about trading with Russia or equipping her for her economic restoration, the first requisite is that the traders and outfitters know—as the French proverb says—on which foot they are dancing. If private property is not effectively guaranteed, then commerce and enterprise are impracticable. But the Soviets refuse the guarantees. There is no doubt about this issue. Any formal agreement reached cannot affect this fundamental disagreement.

Therefore Genoa economically is dead. The Soviets are disappointed and Lloyd George more so. It means that his great idea has collapsed and his predictions are wrecked. This is the compelling reason for his anxiety to save the face of things and substitute some sort of political result for the dead hope of economic achievement.

Instead of admitting that the conference has failed because the real object of the Soviets was misunderstood, it will be said that it was sabotaged by the policy of the French. This explains the great press campaign, the echo of which already has reached you.

ALL AGAINST FRANCE

From the very first day of the conference this campaign began. First it was said that France would withdraw from the conference. But she stayed. Next they declared that France would withdraw because of the Russo-German treaty. She remained, even though her withdrawal would have been amply justified. Later they insisted that France would leave because of differences growing out of the proposed Lloyd George non-aggression pact. Every day they have tried to make France responsible for failure whose only cause has been the inability of the British premier to understand the Soviet purpose, although the United States has comprehended them all along.

This latest Lloyd George proposal for a non-aggression pact is substantially what the United States senate virtually rejected when it adopted the Brandegee reservation to the Pacific treaty. The purpose is to substitute in a calm, unobtrusive manner for existing treaties. There has even been thought of extending it by providing that during the ten years covered no penalties shall be imposed even on account of violation of existing treaties. In short it is disarmament, but of a special kind: disarmament of those who honor their signature for the advantage of those who violate theirs.

FURY REDOUBLED

Amidst all this Premier Poincaré's speech has served only to redouble the fury of a certain section of the British press. To us Frenchmen the principal fault of this speech is that it seems to repeat, word for word, what Briand said last year in private that he would send a policeman if the sheriff failed to collect, etc. Lloyd George's papers call it provocative. We call it ineffectual and say that it plays the game of our opponents. But that is an incident that need have no serious consequences. The Franco-German problem won't be settled at Genoa.

For myself, I want to say that Genoa dies its economic death through the fault of the Soviets, and not as many papers would try to have you believe, through having been assassinated politically by France. I think I have proven this and that is my whole purpose.

SITUATION IN ERIN BETTER

Barnes Declares Hands of Griffith and Collins Are Greatly Strengthened.

By GEORGE N. BARNES

British Parliament Leader

Special Wireless to The Standard-Examiner.

(Copyright, 1922, by The Standard-Examiner.)

LONDON, April 29.—The Irish situation shows noticeable improvement. The elections definitely are called for the beginning of June. The will of the people then will be expressed. It remains to be seen whether the "gun men" will defy, as they are threatening, that will and try to prevent its execution.

It must be remembered, however, that the elections will arm the provisional government with a proper constitutional mandate under which it can make short work of the malignant conspiracy of violence which Ireland has had to endure for months. The improvement throughout the past week can directly be attributed to the courage of Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins. The former at Sligo and the latter at Killarney took their lives in their hands, but their courage won a way for them and greatly strengthened their authority.

EVEN OPPOSE PEOPLE

The efforts of the archbishop of Dublin and the lord mayor to force a truce between the warring elements utterly failed because the radicals demanded establishment of an Irish republic even against the wishes of the Irish people. This was the position of affairs when Collins went to Killarney. Although it was in possession of the irregulars who had blocked the turnpike and torn up the railway, Collins overcame these obstacles, faced the armed men contemptuously and made his voice heard. Griffith at Sligo defied the trouble makers.

The one-day strike called as a protest against military aggression was satisfactory to the originators. Except for hospital and humane services, work ceased completely in the south counties and many of the public offices, including those in Dublin, closed. All sorts of people took advantage of the opportunity to make common cause with labor against the gun men. It was a far different celebration than had been contemplated by the extremists. Southern Ireland was isolated for a day. It was a heavy price to pay, however, the gain may be worth the price, for the poverty of the opposition to the treaty stood revealed as against the overwhelming body of Irish opinion in its favor. It was not a strike against the provisional government, but rather a strike to demand such a government and to encourage it. It will assist Griffith and Collins to continue to assert themselves.

Sympathy with the object of the stoppage has been recorded in resolutions adopted by rate-payers' associations, chambers of commerce, farmers' organizations and other unions as well as by the corporation of Dublin. The lord mayor of Dublin had indeed lead himself into unqualified condemnation for "bullies of the night." He was supported by a big demonstration which is to be followed by another for the coming week.

The Dublin now is resuming its sittings and these proceedings, past and present, must have a far-reaching effect upon the deliberations of that body. The salutary effect of the ebullition of public opinion indeed already has been evidenced by the prompt arrest in Athlone of the officer and twenty men alleged to be concerned in last Tuesday's murder of the commander of the Free State forces.

Get color harmony with Wicker

Drab, unattractive homes are a thing of the past. Today, modern home makers know how much added brightness and charm can be introduced in the home through the use of color. And no other kind of furniture meets the demand for color quite as well as wicker. Makers of reed and fibre furniture have not only developed wonderfully beautiful designs but they have produced new finishes and colors, which, when combined with the proper contrasting tones in upholstery of cretonne or tapestry, bring this type of furniture up to the highest degree of artistic merit.

For Living Room, Sun Room, Boudoir or Porch

Even the most exclusive interior decorators are making use of wicker furniture because of the added opportunity it gives for color harmonies in certain rooms of the home. Wicker is, of course, the one and only thing for sun rooms, it is highly desirable for porch, can be used in a number of different ways in the living room and what could be more delightful than a beautiful chaise longue for the boudoir?

Very Durable and Yet Inexpensive

Reed and fibre furniture is very durably constructed and will wear as long as any other type of furniture. Also, it will not show the marks of wear as is the case with highly polished surfaces. Compared with other types of furniture, you can get more genuine comfort and real satisfaction out of wicker furniture, and a comparison of the prices will show you many ways in which you can effect a real economy in furnishing your home without any sacrifice of beauty or utility.

Exceptional Values Now Being Featured

With our spring shipments of wicker furniture now in readiness for your selection, we announce special prices on our entire stock, which affords the greatest values in years in this type of furniture. The earlier you come, the better the selection will be.
